Our Story

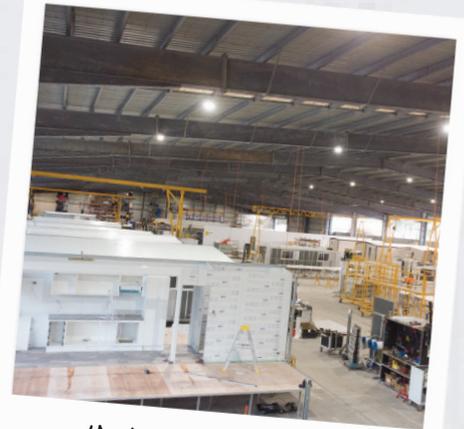

VanHomes was founded with one goal in mind - to create affordable housing solutions for all Australians.

Vito and Nicole Russo founded VanHomes in 2008 after Vito found the process of providing retirement solutions for his relatives to be frustrating, time consuming, and expensive.

With this in mind, the pair set out to create a product that was flexible, affordable, and stress-free to install - as a result, the first VanHome was born!

Since 2008, Vito, Nicole, and the rest of the VanHomes team have been working around the clock to provide our innovative, affordable, and high-quality VanHomes to Australians across the country.

Today, VanHomes is on course to be Australia's first choice for portable housing.

VANHOMES 2010

The VanHomes Difference

VanHomes was founded with innovation in mind.

Since 2008, we've been supplying portable homes that combine affordability and quality, without compromising on either.

While other modular homes must be craned into place, entailing expensive installation fees, VanHomes are far easier to install or relocate should circumstances change in the future.

Our VanHomes are built to comply with and have a legal status of a registrable caravan making them portable and easy to install, without the need for building approval.

VanHomes will bring you a range of benefits, such as:

100% Relocatable

Our homes are built onto a towable chassis, with fully functioning wheels, brakes and lights. Should you move, we can relocate your VanHome anywhere you'd like!

No BA Approval

Our product is a legally registrable caravan, and is legally able to be sited without a building application in NSW only.

No BCA Regulations

As our product is a legally registrable caravan, it is built to caravan standards. This means it can be sited in flood and fire prone areas without the need to comply with the Building Code of Australia.

Size

Our homes range from 17- 59 square metres.

To put this into perspective, the average size of a Sydney apartment is 42 squared meters!

Building Approval?

Building approval is one of the most frustrating and costly elements of construction.

However, with a VanHome, you won't need to go through the frustrating and time consuming process of receiving building approval.

As a VanHome is legally a caravan, it is classed as a vehicle rather than a building. This means that a VanHome is exempt from compliance with the regulations outlined within the Building Code of Australia.

In addition to this, there is NSW legislation that states you can have a caravan for extra family accommodation i.e. a Granny Flat, with no prior council approval.

This means you can save tens of thousands of dollars in fees and approvals.

View the full legislation below:

77 Installations for which approval not required

- (1) The approval of the council is not required for the installation of the following—
 - (a) 2 caravans or tents if they are not occupied for—
 - (i) more than 2 consecutive days, and
 - (ii) more than 60 days in a 12 month period,
 - (b) 1 caravan on land occupied by the owner of the caravan in connection with the owner's dwelling house if the caravan is -
 - (i) used for habitation only by the owner or members of the owner's household, and
 - (ii) maintained in a safe and healthy condition,
 - (c) a caravan on pastoral or agricultural land if the caravan is merely occupied seasonally by persons employed in pastoral or agricultural operations on the land, or
 - (d) a moveable dwelling or associated structure on land to accommodate a person who has been displaced as a result of a natural disaster if the moveable dwelling or associated structure is—
 - (i) maintained in a safe and healthy condition, and
 - (ii) removed within—
 - (A) 2 years after it is installed, or
 - (B) if the relevant local approvals policy for the moveable dwelling or associated structure specifies a longer period—the longer period.

- (2) In this section—

relevant local approvals policy, for a moveable dwelling or associated structure, means the local approvals policy adopted in accordance with the Act, Chapter 7, Part 3 by the council of the local government area within which the moveable dwelling or associated structure is installed, as in force from time to time.

“Council Battles Aussie Icon”

In 2018, VanHomes made headlines across Australia after we were involved in a landmark decision in the Land and Environment Court of NSW (LEC)

The caravan is an iconic staple of Australian housing. In the 1970s and 80s, a caravan in the back garden/yard was about as popular as a tin of milo in the cupboard!

The Russell family wanted to continue this Australian tradition when they bought a VanHome, a legally registered caravan that looks like a cabin. Their local council, however, had a different view; issuing an order for the family to remove the caravan immediately.

George and Korena Russell live in a 3 bedroom home in Sydney's South West, with their 3 adult children and their partners.

They purchased the VanHome for additional accommodation, on the basis that this particular product did not need council approval.

The VanHome, priced at just under $50,000 contains a bedroom, bathroom and kitchen – an ideal solution for the Russells. “When we were issued with an Order from Camden Council to remove it, we were devastated and had no idea what to do,” said Mrs Russell. CEO of VanHomes, Vito Russo, caught wind of the legal order made by the governing body and immediately offered his assistance and legal support.

“We’re a family business with family values. Having the option for the family to stay close to each other, whether it be the younger generation saving for their own home or for elderly folk to downsize without going to a retirement home should be everyone’s right”, Mr Russo said.

This sparked a David vs Goliath style battle, with the Land and Environment Court ultimately ruling that the Russell family were legally justified to keep the VanHome caravan in their backyard.

Senior Commissioner Dixon said in her judgement, “There can be no doubt that the structure is a caravan used for human habitation and thereby within the definition of a moveable dwelling.”

“On that basis, there is no need for any development approval for the registered caravan on the site and the order issued by the council ... requiring the removal of the structure from the premises, is invalid.”

In response to the judgement, Mr Russo said, “we couldn’t be any happier with the outcome. This (judgement) gives clarity on where and how a VanHome caravan can be used. This, in turn will open up a plethora of opportunity for Australians looking to break into the property market, or downsize out of it.”

The ruling is a huge win for all residents of New South Wales, and a step in the right direction for all Australians; with the decision essentially saying “yes you can site a VanHome that is legally a caravan without any council approval”.

The VanHomes Innovation

The innovative and unique design of our VanHomes allows them to be legally registered as a caravan, preventing the need for our customers to seek building approval upon installation in NSW.

In order to be classified as a caravan, VanHomes have to comply with caravan rules. This means they must have lights and brakes during towing, as well as a width of 2.4 metres.

The innovation of VanHomes comes in our unique expanding design. Upon arrival, our VanHomes team unfolds your VanHome, transforming it into your new living space!

This innovation doesn't only make transportation easier, the folding design also means installation only takes 7 hours on average!

One of our most popular products, the single expanding models are high on features and low on price.

The Single Expanding Suite is our mid-range design, combining affordability with comfort.

The Single Expanding Suite is so named as it folds out on one side, doubling the initial floor space pre-installation.

Our Single Expanding Suites range from 7.2 to 10.6 metres in length, folding out to 4.7 metres once installation is complete.

We offer 12 different models of this design, each coming fully fitted with a bathroom, kitchen, and living area.
